

INCLUSIVE FEMINISM

This workshop is designed for women centred organisations looking to reflect on their positionality, relationships and inclusion of multiply marginalised people in their movements. This workshop explores the limitations of white feminism, our interconnected fight for liberation, imagination as a tool for justice and new conceptualisations of feminism to uplift all women and people of marginalised genders.

This training is developed and delivered in collaboration with Nevo Zisin (they/them), a queer, non-binary, Jewish writer, performer, activist and public speaker.

A 101 workshop from Hue or Nevo Zisin is a pre-requisite to this program.

This session is co-facilitated by facilitators who are women, transgender, gender diverse and/or people of colour and has a co-facilitation fee.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

- To understand, articulate and critique how people of colour and transgender people may be excluded from women's spaces
- To explore the interconnected nature of systems of oppression and our collective fight for justice under patriarchy, white supremacy and cis-normativity.
- To understand the intersectional nature of womanhood, transness, femininity and race.
- To develop tools for deconstructing binaries and sitting with difficult contradictions in the feminist movement.
- To develop tangible actions and considerations to make our feminism and feminist spaces more inclusive.

Created and delivered in collaboration with Nevo Zisin: Jewish, queer & non-binary author, activist, performer & educator.
